Wood Stone Offers Cooking Classes at Molbak's Lowell-Hunt Garden Café Outdoor Kitchen

Bellingham, WA, April 20, 2006 – Wood Stone is proud to announce several public cooking classes to be held this summer at Molbak's Lowell-Hunt Garden Café Outdoor Kitchen in Woodinville, WA. Wood Stone Chef Laura Dewell will be teaching classes with seasonal menus and introducing people to open flame cooking.

Chef Laura Dewell has worked with Wood Stone since 2000 in many capacities—as a chef cooking for trade shows, doing restaurant trainings and performing Wood Stone test kitchen visits. Laura brings a broad culinary background to the classes. In addition to teaching a wide array of culinary classes over the years – in both public and private venues – Laura has operated several restaurants of her own including the Georgian-influenced Pirosmeni in Seattle, which brought her national critical acclaim. This is a chance to learn about a great piece of equipment from a great teacher.

Wood Stone equipment was chosen in 2005 to be included in Molbak's Weed Less, Water Less Foliage outdoor garden. The design of this garden includes the Lowell-Hunt Garden Café which features Wood Stone's residential Bistro 3030 gas-fired stone-hearth oven and Mt. St. Helens 45" wood-fired grill with an attached Okanogan single spit rotisserie.

Classes open to the public will be held on Saturday afternoons throughout the summer season at Molbak's outdoor café. Each class is based on a different seasonal menu and will explore possibilities for summer dining in and out of doors.
